

CLE Process

To comply with state policies, the virtual platform will be tracking which sessions you attend and for how long so it can be reported to applicable states for CLE credit. It will work the same when participating in sessions live or on-demand.

The number of credits attendees can earn is based on the number of sessions attended and the number of credits offered by the state. To receive the maximum number of credits, attendees must participate in all the sessions during the program and the remaining concurrent breakout sessions on-demand. If you choose to only participate in the sessions during the live event, you will only receive credit for those sessions.

IFA will give attendees until May 20th to complete on-demand sessions they missed during the live event on May 4-6th. It is up to the attendee to submit for CLE credits to their state for any on-demand sessions attended after May 20th. Should you require a certificate of attendance once you complete the on-demand session, please reach out to events@franchise.org.

IFA is applying for CLE credits for below states but more states may be added after the event pending registrations. IFA can provide necessary documentation for lawyers registering credits after the event for any state not listed below.

Due to the move to virtual events, reporting CLE credits for your state may have changed. Please refer to the chart below for any action’s attendees may have to take post-event to receive credit.

Course approvals may come in at different times. We will update the Legal Symposium website as we receive more accreditations.
