Our panel, all of who participated in the FTC Workshop, will cover many of those proposed changes including: mandating franchise performance representations; creating a private right of action; the disclosure of franchisor brokers; requiring a summary of the FDD; banning the use of franchise compliance questionnaires; banning integration clauses in franchise agreements; and requiring franchisors to make their FDDs available online.

We will also discuss how franchisors assisted franchisees through the first year of COVID, including through royalty and ad fund relief, assisting with negotiations with third parties, and/or pausing the enforcement of certain standards, and how to get back to business “as usual” in the new normal.

Legal and Moral Considerations When Including Social Justice Issues In Brand Positioning and Control

Some businesses, including franchised businesses, have embraced social justice issues in their brand positioning, perhaps more this year than previously. This can be done in advertising, marketing or included in or on the product. Some of these statements or presentations have been considered by part of the public to be overly political or controversial in nature. This could be something as simple as BLM in a restaurant window or the world “Vote” on a branded article of clothing. Or it could be a company or perceived representative of the company making a statement in the context of running a business about countless other issues: political candidates, gun control, or a local issue. What are the legal issues associated with these statements and positions and how do moral and political principles affect them?

The questions that arise depend in part on who is taking or requiring the action. The issues impact on contractual rights, the protection of intellectual property as well as preserving basic rights such as freedom of speech:

- What are the ramifications of such a statement being made by the franchisee without consulting the franchisor? This could include damage control by the franchisor to negative public or media response, as well as actions that the franchisor may consider to control or limit the activity.
- Conversely, what are the ramifications of this position or statement being conveyed (required, recommended, suggested) by the franchisor as a necessary part of the franchisee’s activity? These considerations include contractual arguments by franchisees that such statements cannot or should not be required and broader arguments that such a requirement negatively impacts on other rights, including constitutional freedoms.

Speakers: Carriann Sillman, Esq., Vice President, Legal, Realogy Group LLC; Mackenzie Dimitri, Partner, Einbinder & Dunn LLP

Managing Risks in Contracts and Relationships due to COVID-19

COVID-19 has presented new and substantial issues in managing risks, relationships, and contract performance. It has forced franchisors and franchisees to scrutinize indemnification provisions, insurance procurement requirements, and several other contractual provisions of their franchise agreements, leases, and supply chain contracts. This session will provide an overview of relevant indemnification terms and insurance coverages that franchisors and franchisees should consider in managing risks associated with Covid-19, as well as best practices that can be used to ensure such risks are anticipated and properly addressed. This session will also provide insight into the impact of COVID-19 on contractual concepts, such as force majeure clauses and royalty fees, to help guide future drafting and enforcement of franchise contracts.

Moderator: Richard Brown, Partner, Saxe Doernberger & Vita

Speakers: Xiaoyin Cao, Attorney, Carmen D. Caruso Law Firm; Ben Jones, General Counsel, Sola Franchise, LLC

System-wide Diversity and Inclusion

A series of recent lawsuits has forced franchisors to confront the question: is there structural discrimination in our franchise system? But good systems know that before reaching that question, they must first answer: do we value and, in fact, implement diverse and inclusive practices? This session takes aim at both questions. First, we explore what standard-bearer brands are doing to ensure diversity and inclusion within the franchise system and how they are encouraging franchisees' efforts to do the same. Second, we discuss how brands can investigate potential discriminatory practices (for example, in site selection, royalty waivers, extensions, audits, and so on), and we analyze the legal and factual bases for the recent discrimination claims with an eye toward prevention.

Moderator/Speaker: Aaron-Michael Sapp, Partner, Cheng Cohen LLC

Speakers: Melanie Bootes, Chief Legal Officer, KFC US LLC; Julie Davis, Global Chief Legal Officer & Corporate Secretary, Taco Bell Corp; Lauren Leahy, Chief Legal Officer, Pizza Hut U.S. & Associate General Counsel, Yum! Brands, Inc.; Wanda Williams, Head of Global Franchising, Yum! Brands, Inc.

Franchising and Private Equity

With the adoption of the 2017 NASAA Franchise Commentary on Financial Performance Private equity is more and more dominant in the franchise arena, controlling not only major franchisors but sizable franchisees as well. What attracts private equity interest? How are private equity transactions typically structured? And what are the benefits of private equity involvement? These and other key issues will be examined by a panel of experts at this program.

Moderator/Speaker: Dale Cohen, Partner, Kaufmann, Gildin & Robbins

Speakers: Stephen Aronson, Managing Director/General Counsel, Roark Capital Group

Navigating Distressed Franchisee Issues: Understanding Franchisee Bankruptcies and Exploring Alternatives

Given the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, distressed franchisee issues (unfortunately) are more relevant than ever. This session reviews the basics of the bankruptcy code and explores key topics every franchise lawyer should know when faced with the possibility of a franchisee bankruptcy – including warning signs, the bankruptcy process, and protection of franchisor interests. We will also explore alternatives to bankruptcy and how to help avert franchisee bankruptcies and closures.

Moderator: C.J. Harayda, Partner, Faegre Drinker Biddle & Reath LLP

Speakers: Glenn Moses, Shareholder, Genovese Joblove & Battista, P.A.; Sarah Yatchak, Vice President, Legal & General Counsel Great Clips, Inc.

An A to Z Update on the Arbitration of International Franchise Disputes – What's New!

Arbitration is often required by contracts as a means of dispute resolution, on the basis that it is perceived as being a cheaper, faster, and often better route to a resolution than litigation. That is especially true in the context of international agreements where the parties are in different countries. But complications do arise, and if not considered and managed, they can defeat the perceived advantages of arbitration. So, this workshop will consider best practices and “what’s new” in preparing for and dealing with contractual provisions (such as governing law and venue clauses, arbitration provisions), as well as the conduct of an international arbitration, such as panel selection, venue disputes, e-discovery, confidentiality, and enforcement.

Moderator/Speaker: Craig Tractenberg, Partner, Co-Chair Franchising and International Arbitration, Fox Rothschild LLP

Speakers: Victoria Hobbs, Partner, Bird & Bird; Mary Kate Wagner, Deputy Counsel, New York Office of the ICC International Court of Arbitration

FPRs/Item 19 in COVID

2. Amendment obligations;
3. The use of supplemental FPRS outside of the FDD

4. State regulatory activity (comments and enforcement actions) concerning FPRs; and
5. Examples of industry FPRs to address in post-COVID-19 FDDs.

This session will cover the lifecycle of a franchise action from start to finish. The panel will discuss important procedural considerations, typical claims and defenses, and practical strategies for optimizing your likelihood of success whether in settlement or trial. The topics will include:

- Forum selection and choice of law

Ghost Kitchens, Virtual Restaurants, and the Intersection with Franchising

This session will examine the rapid rise in ghost kitchens, virtual restaurants, and other alternative forms of delivery-centric models and their role in and impact on franchises offering food and beverages, including, in particular, restaurant businesses. What are ghost kitchens and virtual restaurants (and variations of those models), how do they operate, and what are the merits and pitfalls for franchise systems introducing them are just a few of the initial questions this workshop will pose. Using those introductory concepts as a foundation, the panel of in-house and external speakers will examine how these new food preparation models may necessitate changes in franchise agreements and impact management of franchise relationships and disclosure obligations, as well as negotiating and forming relationships with these unique operators, regulatory considerations and other issues.

Supply Chain Disruption in the COVID-19 Era – Planning for Today and Tomorrow

Most franchise systems rely on a network of upstream and downstream supply arrangements, some of which are set out in contracts with varying degrees of rigor. Traditional supply chains continue to be disrupted by dramatic and unpredictable changes in consumer demand and behaviors driven by the COVID-19 pandemic, labour shortages, export restrictions and other protectionist policies introduced by various countries. This workshop will address the broad range of legal and business issues that franchisors and franchisees should consider when assessing and responding to the ongoing impact of the pandemic on their supply chain, as well as when developing a longer range strategy for sourcing supplies and delivering goods and services to end user customers, including:

- how to address allocation of cost and liability for failed contracts;
- assessing the force majeure clause in your current agreements and improving these clauses going forward;
- how to replace or reestablish supply; and
- how to deal with contracts that no longer align with the current facts and actual practices.
